The poor Knights moved from their Station in the North Iſle, going by Pairs, down to the Weſtern-End of that Iſle, and then paſſing up thro' the middle Iſle enter'd into the Choir, and in the middle thereof, they in a joint Body made their Reverences firſt to the Altar, and turning about in a Body, made their Obeiſances towards the Sovereign's Stall, and paſſing up to the Steps near to the Altar, there divided themſelves and ſtood on each ſide one below the other, the Juniors neareſt to the Rails.

The Prebendaries ſtayed at the Door of the Choir until the poor Knights had thus placed themſelves, and then entered by Pairs, making the like double Reverences in a Body together, and entered into their Seats under the Stalls, wherein they all ſtood (except two that attended at the Altar,) until all the Knights Companions had taken their Stalls, and the Officers of the Order were ſeated upon their Forms.

While the Prebendaries were thus entring into their Seats, the Officers of Arms according to their Degrees entred into the Choir, made their double Reverences in a Body jointly, and paſſed up near to the Rails next to the poor Knights on each Side.

Then the Knights Companions, according to the Situation of their Stalls, thoſe in the lower Stalls entring firſt, either by Pairs, or ſingle when the Companion in the oppoſite Stall was abſent, entred into the Choir, and being come a little way beyond the Sovereign's Stall, made double Reverences in the middle of the Choir, and being come up againſt their reſpective Stalls, repeated their Obeiſances, and retired under their Banners, where they ſtood.

The Sovereign at his Entry into the Chapel made his Reverence to the Altar only, his Train being born by the eldeſt Sons of the Dukes of Grafton and Dorſet and the Maſter of the Robes, who (when his Majeſty had aſcended his Stall, and made his Reverence therein to the Altar) placed themſelves upon the Steps going up to the Sovereign's Stall.

The Sovereign being thus placed, Garter went into the middle of the Choir, and after his double Reverences, having his Rod or Scepter in his hand, turned himſelf to the Prince of Wales, who thereon came from under his

Banner

Banner into the middle of the Choir, and there made his Reverence to the Altar, and to the Sovereign in his Stall, and then went up the neareſt Way to his Stall, where he repeated the ſame Reverences, and then ſat down.

All the other Companions continued ſtanding under their Banners.

The Prelate was conducted by the Serjeant of the Veſtry to the Altar, who made the like Reverences, and two Prebendaries went likewiſe conducted thither in like manner by the Verger.

Garter then went into the middle of the Choir with the uſual Obeiſances, and repaired to the Place under the Stall of the late Duke of York, where he had before laid his Hatchments upon a Stool, and took up the Banner, holding it in his Hand almoſt rolled up, whilſt Lion King of Arms and the eldeſt Provincial King of Arms met, and came down from the Haut-pas near the Rails of the Altar, who having made their Reverences in the middle of the Choir jointly, came to the two ſenior Knights the Dukes of Somerſet and Argyll ſtanding under their Banners, and bowing to them, theſe Knights thereon came out into the middle of the Choir oppoſite to their own Stalls, and made their Reverences, then joyned and advanced towards the Place where theſe Hatchments were laid, where Garter delivered to theſe two Knights, making a Bow to them, the Banner, which theſe Knights received and carried with the Point thereof forward a little declining, being preceded by theſe Officers of Arms; and being advanced to the Degrees, or firſt Step towards the Altar, made their Reverences to the Altar and to the Sovereign, and at the Rails, to the Altar only, and then theſe Knights kneeling, delivered the Banner to the Prelate, who gave it to the Prebendaries aſſiſting, who placed the ſame upright at the South End of the Altar. Theſe Knights then deſcended making the like Reverences, and attended by thoſe Offices of Arms, retired under their Banners. And theſe Officers of Arms making their double Obeiſances in the middle of the Choir, retired to their former Stations.

Then the two next Officers of Arms in Seniority deſcended in like manner, and came to the next two Senior Knights the Duke of Kent and the Earl of Strafford, who removed from under their Banners, to whom Garter delivered the Sword of the late Duke of York, the Pomel or Hilt held upwards, which was carried up to the Rails of the Altar with the ſame Ceremonies, and then theſe Knights deſcended as the former did, and retired ſtanding under their Banners, and theſe Officers of Arms returned to their former Stations.

Two other Officers of Arms waited upon the two next Senior Knights abovementioned, who offered the Sword in the former Method.

His Banner was likewiſe offered by the ſame two Senior Knights preſent.

His Sword by the two next Knights in Seniority.

His Helm and Creſt by the two Knights next to them in Seniority, in the ſame manner as the other Hatchments were before carried.

The Knights Companions ſtanding thus under their Banners, during all the time of theſe Offerings of the Atchievements, Garter then went into the middle of the Choir, and making his Reverences turned himſelf to the Eldeſt Knight, pointing to him with his Rod, who thereon came from his Station under his Banner into the middle of the Choir oppoſite to his Stall, and there made his Reverences, and then went up by the neareſt way to his Stall, where he repeated his Reverences, and ſat down.

Garter repeated the ſame to the next Senior Knight, and to all other the Companions preſent in like manner, according to the Situation of their Stalls, which all of them, the Seniors firſt, entred into through the neareſt Paſſages, with the like Ceremonies, but where the Knights were Companions in oppoſite Stalls they removed at the ſame Time from under their Banners, and after making their joint Reverences in the middle of the Choir, at the ſame Time entered into their Stalls.

All the Knights Companions being thus ſeated in their Stalls, Garter after the uſual Obeiſances ſummoned down the two Senior Knights preſent, the Dukes of Somerſet and Argyll, appointed by the Sovereign to inſtall his Royal Highneſs the Duke, who after making Reverences in their Stalls deſcended, and in
